Resource description	This is an album of six videos that focus on the work of six contemporary Australian artists and explore their sources of inspiration and subject matter, their selection and use of techniques, processes and technologies, the materials they use and the styles with which they work. Michel Lawrence interviews each of the artists in their own studio space – they are Louise Hearman, Luke Cornish, Deb Williams, Bruce Latimer, Andrew Browne and Graham Fransella. The videos are 2–3 minutes each in length.
Relevance of resource to careers education	The stories of Luke Cornish, Graham Fransella are of particular career interest. Teachers could explore how these artists' views of the world, their backgrounds and chance events have led them to their careers.

Resource description	Imagine what it would feel like to spend your life looking after remnants of the past. This is the life of many museum curators. Enchanted by old things since childhood, Catherine Reade has turned this love into a career where she can use her knowledge of art history to help manage and care for collections of art and artefacts.
Relevance of resource to careers education	Teachers can use this video to ask students a set of questions after viewing related to opportunity awareness, self-awareness and decision making: Questions to ask after viewing: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• What are three things that a curator is responsible for?</li> <li>• What two childhood influences does Catherine Reade credit for leading her to this career?</li> <li>• What qualifications does she have to fulfil this role?</li> <li>• Catherine Reade has undertaken a master's degree that developed her understanding of the influence of world events on art and design. Do you think it is important to understand the historical context of an artwork when viewing it? Why/Why not?</li> </ul>
