The Asian entrepreneur in me

Resource ID	M019472
Link to resource	http://resolver.thelearningfederation.edu.au/?rft_id=10257/5862189
Resource description	In this learning sequence, students will use the lens of 'entrepreneurism' to explore two distinct, but related, 21 st -century topics: future jobs and the rise of Asia. A problem-based learning approach will guide students toward developing their own understanding of what the future might hold and to hypothesise possible career scenarios and the pathways they might choose to achieve their goals.
Relevance of resource to careers education	This is a useful resource supporting the Australian Curriculum Year 9 Work Studies curriculum. It also provides students with some valuable perspectives on working with a diversity of Asian cultures – as reflected in the cross-curriculum priority of Asia and Australia's engagement with Asia.

Resource description	This set of worksheets and activities is designed to develop career-management competence in the areas of personal management, learning and work exploration, and career building. The resource contains 11 detailed workbooks, a work-experience journal for high school students, a performance review template and a wide range of activities. The worksheets and activities are intended to support the Australian blueprint for career development and were developed when the blueprint was being trialled.
Relevance of resource to careers education	This is a useful set of resources for career education programs in secondary schools. The workbooks are particularly useful. Each workbook focuses on a specific career-management competency at a specific phase. When the learner has completed the workbook, it is evaluated by an assessor. The activities and worksheets are intended for a broad audience, including people already in the full-time workforce, but they are equally relevant for secondary school students. The activities are appropriate and range from simple coping strategies for when things are going wrong to targeted job research.

Resource description	The PreVet program is designed for students in the middle years and explores ideas around work culture and the value of literacy and numeracy in working life. It is a vast, multi-layered website providing student and teacher resources promoting job pathways for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Island people in remote northern Australia. The site describes 26 job pathways organised under 18 topic headings. Resources highlight the experiences of people working in communities and presents realistic and achievable career options for students. Each topic includes a magazine introducing a role model and relevant job pathways; a rich lesson (a zipped file of lesson plans and student worksheets), multimedia games, an interactive quiz, teacher notes and transcripts of all texts. Each magazine is replete with videos, showing people talking about their work and carrying out its activities; while the numerous interactive student activities throughout each topic focus on the literacy and numeracy skills employed in that pathway.
Relevance of resource to careers education	This rich resource is of outstanding value to exploring the world of work in remote locations in Australia. The resource provides a wide range of positive role models and activities that are designed to motivate students to explore different career pathways and to value the role of schooling, literacy and numeracy in work life. The resource is highly relevant for a range of content descriptions in the Australian Curriculum: Work Studies, Years 9–10 including those about investigating a wide range of occupations and the skills and personal qualities they require, sourcing career information and resources, and using career decision-making processes to filter career scenarios. Particular pathways offer insight into content descriptions about workplace communication and teamwork.
